New York Rock Band Hotel Security Releases Raucous New Single "Forget It"

New York, NY — Brace yourself for Hotel Security's thunderous new single, "Forget It," released today on all major streaming services. An adrenaline-charged metal-inspired anthem, "Forget It" explores throwing the past to the wayside and embracing the unknown.

In the tradition of Hotel Security's debut self-titled 2021 album, "Forget It" delivers a relentless aural assault by the four-piece band that draws listeners in from the start with Austin Rowley's meaty metal guitar riffs, Luna Soturi's pounding drums, Christophe Cochon's sturdy basslines, and keyboardist/vocalist Matt Geline's soaring synth pads. The frenetic yet rock-solid instrumental, composed and arranged by Rowey, sets the stage for Geline's lyrics, which urge listeners to leave behind their regrets and charge headfirst into the future: "Forget it; purge your brain; forget the pain; you will never be the same."

In "Forget It," the band tackles the universal desire for a fresh start, but as the song reaches the bridge, the lyrics begin to suggest that the consequences might not be worth the cost. "I wanted to show the appeal of this radical future-forward attitude, but also the dangers, so I thought it would be funny to make the narrator literally start having amnesia by the end of the song," says Geline. "So yeah, I was definitely having fun with the concept." Adds Rowey: "This song continues our effort to give our audience music that they enjoy, but also something that we hope connects with their lives."

"Forget It" continues Hotel Security's track record of energetic rock music that isn't afraid to play with abstract concepts. The band has been performing at venues across NYC since 2021, and they are excited to play "Forget It" and more new material at their next show at Young Ethel's in Brooklyn this Halloween (10/31/23).
